DEPARTMENT 1 · DEVELOPMENT AND IT · PROFESSION 15

AI creative specialist

Profession 15 of 10 in Development and IT.

What the profession means

An AI creative specialist uses generative tools in creative work: concept generation, image and video drafts, voice, and the review and rights checks that make the output usable for a client.

What professionals do every day

Writes creative briefs, generates concepts and drafts with image, video and voice tools, selects and refines the best outputs, checks rights and brand fit, and documents the process.

Why businesses hire them, and what problems they solve

Clients want faster concepts and more variations. A specialist who can generate, select and check AI output saves time without losing quality or rights clarity.

- Generated images that break brand or copyright rules.
- Concepts that look generic.
- Client files with unclear ownership.

Skills you need

- Creative briefs and prompt writing.
- Image and video generation tools.
- Selection, retouching and brand fit.
- Rights, licensing and disclosure of AI-generated content.

Client-ready portfolio project

A campaign concept pack for a fictional brand: brief, 20 generated concepts, a shortlist of five with reasons, a prompt log, a rights and disclosure note.

Worked example

Worked example. The brief asks for 'warm, calm, local' imagery. Twenty drafts are generated; five are chosen because they match the brand palette and avoid recognisable people or logos.

Assignment with full solution

ASSIGNMENT

Campaign concept pack with a rights note

Business problem: A brand needs campaign concepts quickly and a clear record of how they were made.

Steps

1. Write a one-page brief with mood, palette and forbidden elements.
2. Generate 20 concepts, logging the prompt and settings for each.
3. Shortlist five using the brief as the checklist.
4. Write a rights and disclosure note: tool terms, third-party elements, labelling.

Expected output: A pack with the brief, prompt log, shortlist and rights note.

SOLUTION (ANSWER KEY)

The shortlist is judged against the brief, not personal taste. The prompt log makes the work reproducible. The rights note records what the tool's terms allow and what the client must disclose.

Common mistakes

- Using generated work without checking tool terms.
- Generated people or logos that imitate real ones.
- No prompt log, so the work cannot be reproduced.
- Presenting raw outputs as finished design.

Freelancing opportunities

- Concept packs and mood boards for brands.
- AI-assisted campaign production (with a human design review).
- Briefs for 'AI image', 'AI creative', 'concept design'.
