CHAPTER 1

Introduction

Welcome to SkillNavora's Digital Marketing Course. Varun wrote this chapter to help you start. Read it first. It shows you how to use the course, which free tools to start with, how to study, what people ask most, and the whole digital marketing plan on one page.

1. How to use this course: 4 paths

This course has 12 courses inside it. You can read it from the start, or jump to the part you need. Each part works alone. The order helps, because each part uses what came before it.

INTERACTIVE VERSION

Path A: Start an online business from zero

Who is it for? A new founder or a small team with no online presence yet.

What to do: Do the assignments in order. Start with research, then build your website, then bring in visitors, then make sales.

You are done when you have: a working website, a list of at least 50 people who said yes to your emails, and one campaign with its results written down.

Path B: Grow one channel for your business or affiliate links

Who is it for? Someone who already has a business, or earns from affiliate links, and wants one channel to work, like YouTube.

What to do: Go straight to the module for that channel. Also read this chapter's Section 4 on tracking.

You are done when you have: one channel running for 30 days, with a short report every week.

Path C: Work as a freelance digital marketer

Who is it for? Someone who wants to sell marketing help to clients, from home.

What to do: Each assignment becomes a finished piece of work. Show it to clients, sell it alone, or sell it as a bundle.

Example prices (just examples, not market rates): about $500 to set up a website with Google Analytics, or about $1,000 per client for a paid ads bundle. Real prices depend on your market, your work and your skill.

You are done when you have: three portfolio pieces with a before and after, and one written proposal.

Path D: Get a digital marketing job and ask for more pay

Who is it for? Someone looking for a job, or a raise.

What to do: Build the same portfolio as Path C. In an interview, explain each piece: the goal, what you did, the tool you used, and the result.

You are done when you have: a portfolio page and a short case study for each channel you say you know.

NOT SURE WHICH PATH TO PICK?

Start with Path A. Stop after the module that matches your goal. You will still have one finished project to show.

CHAPTER 1 · SECTION 2

4 free tools to make content in 10 minutes

You do not need money to start. These four free tools help you find a topic, write, find pictures, and make a short video. After a few tries, this takes about 10 minutes.

The 4 steps

1. Find a topic people search for right now. Open Google Trends. Pick your country, choose the last 90 days, and choose Google Search, News or YouTube. Look at the Rising related queries. Google Trends marks very big jumps as Breakout. Check the current rule on the site. Pick one topic with a clear question.
2. Write a draft. Open OpenAI Playground or any AI writing tool you can use. Ask for a numbered headline, a short post with headings, and a 30-second video script. Remove any instructions that came back in the answer. Copy the text into your own document. Then check every fact and rewrite anything that sounds generic.
3. Find pictures and clips you are allowed to use. Use Pexels for free photos and vertical clips. In Google Images, use the usage-rights filter: Tools, then Usage rights, then Creative Commons licenses. Menus change, so look for the current name. Save the link and the license with each picture.
4. Make a vertical video (9:16). Open the Canva Video Editor or the Canva social media video maker. Pick a 9:16 size. This works for TikTok, Instagram Reels, Facebook Reels and YouTube Shorts.

The 3-second plan

Split your video into parts of about 3 seconds. Each part has one job. The background clip keeps playing through every cut.

Part	Time	What the viewer sees	Why
Scene 1	0 to 3 s	A big, moving title	Stop people from scrolling past
Part 2	3 to 6 s	Heading 1 at the bottom, background keeps playing	Your first point
Part 3	6 to 9 s	Heading 2 at the bottom, background keeps playing	Your second point
Part 4	9 to 12 s	Heading 3 at the bottom, background keeps playing	Your third point
End	Last 3 s	A moving button-style slide	Tell people the one thing to do next

Keep headings short. Keep text away from the edges of the screen. Export the file in the format the app asks for.

BEFORE YOU POST

- Check every fact and number.
- Check that you have the right to use each picture and clip, including for business.
- If you were paid or given something for a post, say so clearly.

CHAPTER 1 · SECTION 3

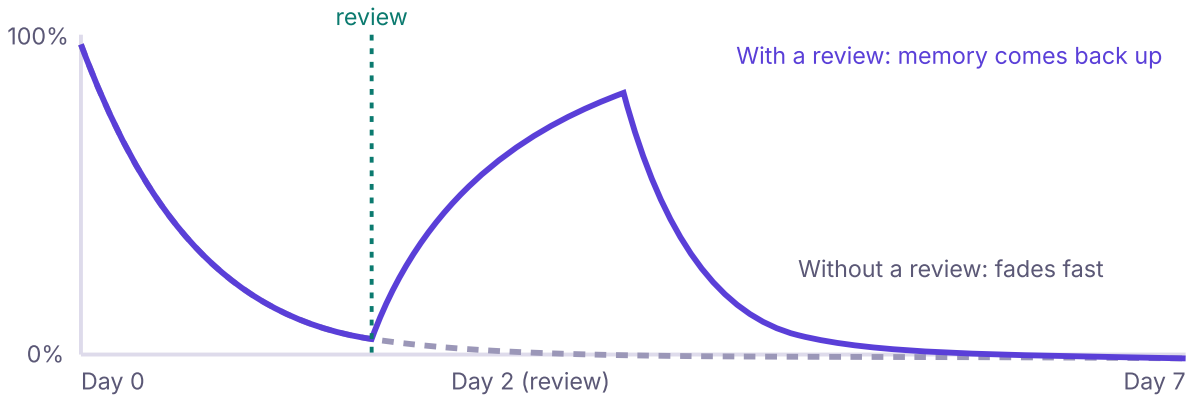

Course resources and your workbook

This section helps you study well and gives you your toolbox. Use the workbook to turn what you read into things you do.

The 48-hour rule

Most people forget new things fast if they do not use them. Most people forget new information quickly unless they review it. The exact amount depends on the person, so use the idea, not a number. The lesson is simple: review your notes within 48 hours, and pick one action from each lesson to do that week.

Picture: memory with and without a review (illustrative)

Illustrative only. Not a measured figure.

Getting started checklist

Done	Step	Why
☐	Save your notes in one document	You will read them again within 48 hours
☐	Read the FAQ in Section 4 of this chapter	It answers the first questions about order and cost
☐	Open the toolbox below and make the free accounts you need	The assignments use these tools
☐	Write your path and one goal for the next 30 days	A clear goal tells you what to skip

Workbook: how to use each section

1. Read the section once.

3. Do one action from the checklist within 48 hours.
4. Write one line about the result, with the date.

WORKBOOK PAGE: WEEK 1

My customer in one sentence: _____

One thing I will finish in 48 hours: _____

CHAPTER 1 · SECTION 4

Questions people ask first

Short answers to the questions learners ask most.

Should I do the modules in order?

If you are starting from zero, yes. The early modules build your customer picture, your offer and your website. The later modules use them. If you already have a website and an email list, start with the channel you need. Go back to the early modules when you get stuck.

What should I make for each assignment?

Each assignment gives you one finished thing: a research summary, a web page, a set of emails, a post plan or a report. A first try can take a few hours. Make it clear and dated, because you will show it to clients or employers.

Can I learn with no money?

Yes, for most modules. The free tools in Section 2 and the free plans in the toolbox cover research, writing and basic tracking. Paid ads need money. You can still learn the setup and the reports with a small test budget that you control.

Can I finish in half the time?

Some learners do one assignment a day and skip reading they do not need. That works, but only if each assignment is complete. A rushed piece of work does not help you learn.

What about jobs and clients?

If you want to	Make this
Freelance	3 sample pieces and a one-page proposal
Get a job	A portfolio page, 2 case studies, and a 2-minute talk about one result
Grow your own business	A 90-day plan with a weekly report

STUCK?

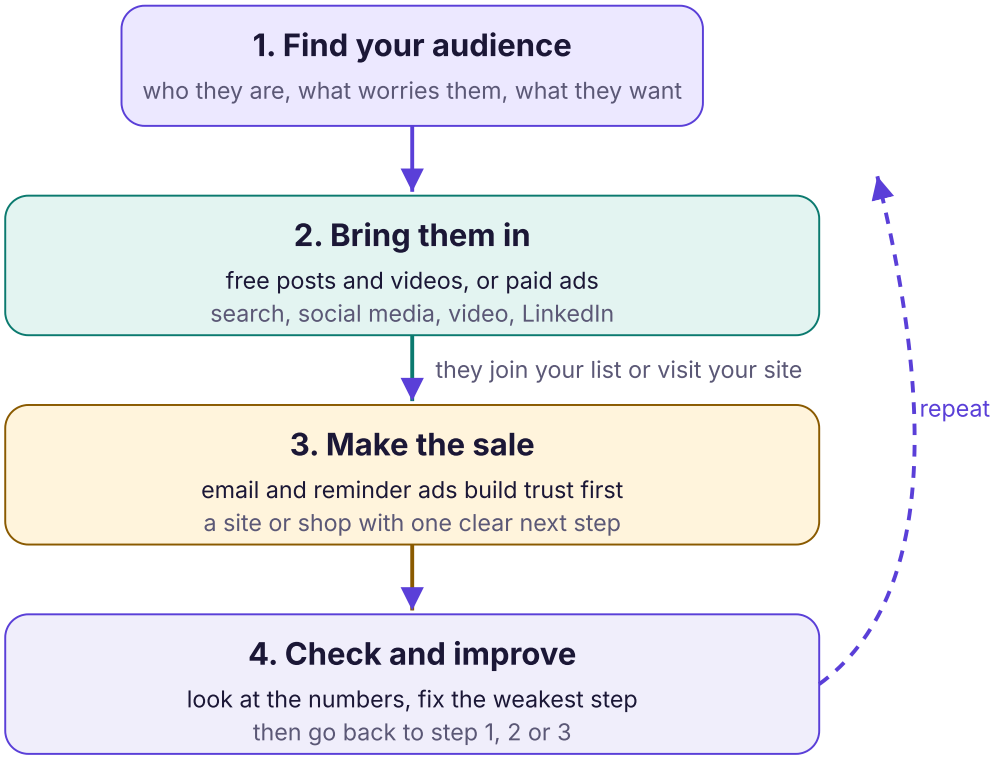

Write down your question, the module number, and what you tried. Bring it to the next live class or your study group. Say what result you expected.

CHAPTER 1 · SECTION 5

Digital marketing made simple: the 30,000-foot view

Every channel in this course is one part of the same plan. Read this section first. Come back to it when a channel feels like it stands alone.

The 4 steps on one page

Step 1: Find your audience

Know who you are talking to before you pick a channel. Answer these four questions:

- Who are they? Age, place, job, and how much they earn.
- What worries them? The problem they think about, in their own words.
- Why you? Why would they pick you over the next option?
- What changes for them? How their life or work looks after the problem is gone.

EXERCISE

Finish this sentence: I help [who] who struggle with [problem] get [result]. Unlike [other option], I [your edge].

Step 2: Bring them in

There are two ways. Most businesses use both.

Free posts and videos

- How-to: Answer one question well. A checklist or a short tutorial works.
- Stories and reviews: Show a real customer's change. Ask their permission first.
- Fun content: Short, honest and human, so people want to share it.

Paid ads

Platform	Who it reaches	Official help (check)
Google Ads	People searching right now	ads.google.com
Meta Ads (Facebook and Instagram)	People by interests and habits	facebook.com/business/help
YouTube Ads	People watching videos about a topic	Google Ads help: YouTube ads
X (Twitter) Ads	People reading posts on X	business.x.com
LinkedIn Ads	Working people, by job title and company	LinkedIn Marketing Solutions

Careful: Google Ad Manager (admanager.google.com) is for website owners who sell ad space. For your own ads, use Google Ads.

Step 3: Make the sale with an email list and reminder ads

Most people do not buy the first time they visit. An email list lets you keep in touch with people who said yes. Reminder ads (called retargeting) show your ads again to people who already visited your site. Keep these reminders gentle.

- Email list: Give something useful in return for an email address. Then send a welcome series. Example tool: Mailchimp.
- Reminder ads: Add the tracking code from your ad app to your site. Follow the privacy rules where you and your visitors live.
- The sale: One page, one next step, a clear price, and an easy way to change their mind.

Step 4: Check and improve

Track each step: visits, sign-ups, sales and repeat buyers. Example tool: Google Analytics. Fix the weakest step first. Change one thing at a time, and keep what works.

Your 30,000-foot checklist

Done	Item
☐	I wrote one sentence about my customer (Step 1)
☐	I picked one free idea and one paid platform (Step 2)
☐	I planned one email offer and one sales page (Step 3)
☐	I picked one number to track for each step (Step 4)
